

“ Cultural and Societal Expectations in Hookup Culture ”

Continuation on the second page

“A lot of it is also rooted in misogyny and the societal expectation on women keeping themselves “pure” and untouched” by not having casual sex with multiple people before marriage. Marriage and kids is also seen as the ultimate end goal for women culturally” -Anonymous

Misogyny in Hookup Culture:

Hookup culture often perpetuates misogynistic attitudes, emphasizing conquest over connection. This is reflected in popular media and music. For example: “Sometimes I tell ‘em I love ‘em because I just wanna fuck ‘em. I never love ‘em or cuff ‘em, and when we done, I’ma duck ‘em.”

—Trey Songz ft. Nicki Minaj

“Tokischa” “?Tú chicha' o no chicha'?” (Do you fuck or not?) “Déjameo lleno 'e leche” (fill me up with cum!) “Dame lengua, dame de'o, rómpemelo en to'a las poses” (Lick it, finger it, buss it in all positions)

Tokischa- Delincuenta

The backstory is that a guy was seeing two girls at the same time (hooking up with both), but he told one of the girls beforehand that he wasn't interested in a serious relationship, which she was fine with. However, when he began having sex with the other girl, she got upset.
